

A LEGACY BORN FROM SACRIFICE

Raffling a community-sewn quilt, collecting donations with roadside “bucket brigades,” and working for little or no pay were ways community, staff, and Adventist church members came together to open health reform sanitariums in the late 1800s. Sacrifice, resilience, and resourcefulness were hallmarks of the cooperative effort to build Adventist facilities across the country.

No. II

TIME CAPSULE

Legacy Series | AdventHealth

Courtesy